New Delhi is the capital of India, which can be easily called the most nontypical in the world. The thing is that de-jure it is a district of the city of Delhi. But de facto it's the seat of the government, beautiful architecture, many tourist attractions, and prosperity of this district have long ago made it independent. The tourists who have already visited India will notice the difference between the capital and other cities. It is much cleaner, with unusual architecture prevailing, and the locals have a lot of European traditions and habits. View New Delhi hotels available for your next trip. Britannica Quiz. New Delhi is all at once chaotic and calm, a complicated city where cows often wander the shanty-lined streets. The 17th century Red Fort is a mass of domes and turrets, while Chandni Chowk is an exercise in friendly haggling. Jantar Mantar features larger-than-life sundials and astronomical instruments that are still used to predict the weather. Travelers and locals flock to the India Gate, the national monument of India that honors the soldiers who died in World War I and the Third Afghan War. Start planning for New Delhi.
