Talking to children about God in the Age of Doubt. He answered: "If the idea is that when children are young you should give them very definite answers that do not reflect your actual experience of life, then you're lying to your children, and one day they're going to realize that you were a hypocrite. And isn't being true as much as possible in life the best kind of education you can give the young?" Rabbi David Wolpe of Los Angeles, the author of "Teaching Your Children About God," agreed. He uses his own youthful bout with atheism to encourage children to embrace their own struggles. "When a child asks a question about God, they are not coming Overcoming Awkwardness. Granted, talking to your children about sex may be one of the most awkward parenting tasks you will face. But it is well worth your effort. "Over time," says a mother named Diane, "the awkwardness fades, and talking to your child about sex can actually become a bonding opportunity." Steven, quoted earlier, agrees. Secure Daughters, Confident Sons: How Parents Guide Their Children into Unlike conventionally religious parents " whose faiths often come with robust programs to inculcate children with rituals, prayers, and faith " agnostics have no blueprint for an almighty deity to pass on to their children. Complicating the matter is the fact that God as a concept defies the reductivism often necessary to talk to kids about the big stuff. After all, the whole of human history has wrestled with the idea of an all-knowing higher power. How is a parent seriously supposed to explain this kind of stuff in the brief minutes before bedtime? Agnostic parents have to work harder, Dr. J

Another way to talk to your children about God's blessings is to point out situations where God has intervened in your life or the lives of others. He cares very deeply about each one of us, and He does intervene in our lives. One lady related an incident from her childhood. She had gone to bed one evening when a brick came flying through the window and landed on her pillow"right in the indentation where her head had been just moments before! Parents need to show their children how to walk through the steps to build their relationship with God, and walk through those steps with them. We see in Psalm 78:4-7 that we as parents are to make God's law known to our children. It is a kind of heritage that is to be passed from generation to generation. A collection of TED Talks (and more) on the topic of God. For as many people as there are on Earth, there are as many answers to the question: Are you there, God? Talking to children about God is a key component of their sense of self. Children are taught that they are important, but why are they important? Ask your children why they matter. I have asked thousands of children "why are you important." The usual answers are "I get good grades, I am good at sports, I have a nice job/boyfriend/girlfriend, my parents love me." All these answers spell trouble, because they are all based on something human, and everything human can change. Are we always going to be the brightest in the class, or have that boyfriend or feel our parents' love? Tell your children that God loves them. Explain that the world is filled with evidence of God's concern and artistry. If the language seems alien or difficult, find ways to ease into it. Mark 9:36-37. Chapter Parallel Compare. Children of believing parents often ask their mothers and fathers questions about faith. However, parents do not always respond correctly to such questions. And here, we are not talking about the content of their answers only, but also about their attitude to such questions in general. What mistakes are the most common and how to avoid them? Archpriest Andrei Bliznyuk, a teacher at St. Peter's School in Moscow, replies. Moreover, you need to seriously prepare for answers to your children's questions. It is best even to do this in advance: to talk with other parents, with your spiritual father, and to read Orthodox literature on this topic. Sometimes your child may ask you a question that you do not know how to answer right away. We are prime influencers in our children's lives--even if many influence their children more by their absence and disengagement than anything else.
