INTRODUCTION. My first experience in observing the prayers and rituals of another faith tradition and race struck me as poignant and holy. Like most kids, I definitely could be silly and frivolous but not about religion. That conversation with the God of Abraham within the Torah is begun with an African Nation called Mitzraim (Egypt) in the Torah, Bible and Misr (Egypt) in the Quran. In order to understand fully what "African American" culture is we have to begin prior to that conversation's beginnings to get a full understanding because of our relationship to that conversation. A striking similarity between the two. Which is in my humble opinion the foundation of what in the very end becomes the "African American" culture. The God of Abraham places Egypt into His Judgement which is slightly different from Egypt's judgement of Maat it appears because within The God of Abraham's judgement everyone is freely given the answer to how to overcome it not just a few. Germans and African Americans, unlike other works on African Americans in Europe, examines the relationship between African Americans and one country, Germany. In the nineteenth century, German immigrants to America and to such communities as Charleston and Cincinnati interacted within the boundaries of their old-world experiences and ideas and within surrounding regional notions of a nation fracturing over slavery. In the post-Civil War era in America through the Weimar era, Germany became a place to which African American entertainers, travelers, and intellectuals such as W. E. B. Du Bois could go to escape American racism and find new opportunities. 50 Books That Every African American Should Read. The campaign for African American rights—usually referred to as the civil rights movement or the freedom movement—went forward in the 1940s and 1950s in persistent and deliberate steps. In the courts the NAACP successfully attacked restrictive covenants in housing, segregation in interstate transportation, and discrimination in public recreational facilities. Activist African Americans adopted "Freedom Now" as their slogan to recognize the Emancipation Proclamation centennial in 1963 (indeed, a short-lived all-Black Freedom Now Party was formed in Michigan and ran candidates in the general election of 1964). National attention in the spring of 1963 was focused on Birmingham, Alabama, where King was leading a civil rights drive.
