Description:

Tim Allen, star of the hit sitcom Home Improvement, takes on quantum philosophy, intergender relationships, and the male midlife crisis in a joke-filled (but ultimately serious) "weekend in the life" narrative. It's an odd combination, shifting from enthusiastic gushing over restored sports cars to earnest elaborations upon Deepak Chopra and Fritjof Capra, but Allen manages to pull it off. If you're expecting a standard unchallenging celebrity-penned "book," or a fluff-filled "memoir," you're going to be quite surprised.

Willie really hadn't thought it would ever be possible to feel this way in his afterlife. Sure, he was surrounded by ghosts on a daily basis at the Hollywood Ghost Club. But none of them were like the drummer he'd had the luck to crash into on the Walk of Fame. In March 2010 he was appointed Ambassador for Manchester City in the Community. Not Really Here. Paul Lake. I'm grateful to so many people for their help in getting Not Really Here off the ground. It was my good friend, the photographer Kevin Cummins, who started the ball rolling by introducing me to his literary agent before a City v Arsenal game. Kevin Conroy Scott, from the Tibor Jones agency, lent me his ear, read some draft chapters and gave me the Not Really Here Lyrics. Far away and so long ago I slipped into your dreams Before the end of the show. Your refrain sounded so sweet and clear But I'm not really here It's just the afterglow. Nobody knows of the trouble I've seen Nobody knows of my sorrow Got the Sunday to Monday, Monday to Friday blues In the pouring rain. Emptiness is such a sad affair But I don't really care It's all just a memory to me now. You and I, is forever [Incomprehensible] In every rainfall of fondness.
