In my new book, "Sex, Murder and the Meaning of Life," I collect some of the studies my colleagues and I have done about the psychology behind our decisions - from why we have homicidal fantasies to why we can harbor prejudices. But some of the most interesting conclusions come from our studies of relationships and sex. Why do men spend money on flowers when losing cash would otherwise anger them? What do we regret? These sex differences may reflect different evolutionary selection pressures on human males and females; they provide powerful cross-cultural evidence of current sex differences in reproductive strategies.

Discussion focuses on proximate mechanisms underlying mate preferences, consequences for human intrasexual competition, and the limitations of this study. Keywords. Burley, N. Thus we witness a predictable hazard of live production of porn, clearly unfair to Lawrence who has proven himself a solid performer in hundreds of professionally produced (unlike this painfully amateurish production) Adult features, with his acting skills unquestioned.
