Description:

Since the first edition in 1973, Bridges Not Walls has examined the power and promise of interpersonal communication in intimate relationships, families, communities, and cultures. The text presents a broad range of scholarly and popular articles drawn from several disciplines, including communication, psychology, and philosophy, all chosen for their understandability and practical applicability. Within these readings are thought-provoking discussions of interpersonal contact, identity-management, verbal and nonverbal cues, perception, listening, assertiveness and self-disclosure, family communication, intimacy and social support, defensiveness and hurtful communication, conflict management, culture, and dialogue. Together, the readings emphasize the social and relational elements of human communication, the overlapping influence of verbal and nonverbal cues, the prominence of culture, and the close connection between quality of communication and quality of life.

Click to View on AmazonOverview.Â You can learn how communication and interpersonal communication are related; how identities are co-constructed; the ins and outs of verbal and nonverbal codes; perceiving and listening; expressing and disclosing; communicating with family and friends; communicating with intimate partners; coping with communication problems like deception, defensiveness, power, and verbal aggression; conflict management; bridging cultural differences; and promoting dialogue. This essay examines Stewart's Bridges Not Walls: A Book about Interpersonal Communication as a textual artifact in discussing dialogic storytelling. Using interpretive qualitative research, we detail the philosophy of dialogic storytelling and then engage in an interpretation of Bridges Not Walls. This essay first situates our interpretive path through the metaphors of historicity, temporal common center of responsiveness, and horizon of historical consciousness, which manifest dialogic storytelling. The interpretive method used in this essay is a philosophically constructive approach gro

Kari:I have learned several areas of communication, that I need to work on. I find that my greatest issue, is communicating with family members. I have found that my patience, is more limited, I want them to get to the point.Â how we choose to respond affects how interpersonal your communication can become. The other statement that stood out to me is, the social environment that we grow up, influences the behavior patterns that we develop (Burley-Allen, 1995). My childhood was not an easy one. My house growing up was very strict, I was to be obedient, nothing was good enough. BRIDGES NOT WALLS: A BOOK ABOUT INTERPERSONAL COMMUNICATION 11th edition.
