

Woman's Nature: Rationalizations of Inequality, Marian Lowe, 1983, Pergamon Press, 1983, 9780080301433

The book by S. Boucheron, G. Lugosi and P. Massart is a most welcome and complete account on the modern developments of concentration inequalities in the context of the probabilistic method. The monograph covers most of the important and recent developments, with a constant care on illustrations and applications which make the theory so fruitful and attractive. The emphasis put on information theoretic methods is one main features of the exposition, with considerable benefit in the approach to a number of fundamental results and tools, such as for example the convex distance inequality or sharp Woman's nature. rationalizations of inequality.
